The Honor Farm Master Plan establishes a long-term master plan for the phased development and operation of 2,373 acres of public park and open space property located in unincorporated Pueblo County west of Pueblo Boulevard (SH 45) and south of US Highway 50 West. The Honor Farm property was acquired in 2001 by the City of Pueblo, and as part of the land acquisition the City of Pueblo granted a conservation easement to the State of Colorado that allows for park, recreation, and open space areas, but prohibits future commercial and residential development of the property. The property is being planned to be the future location of a regional park that will act as an open space separator between the City of Pueblo and the Pueblo West Metropolitan District. The property is a buffer between Lake Pueblo State Parks (26 sq. miles) and the developed areas within the City (44 sq. miles) and the Pueblo West Metropolitan District (57 sq. miles).

The purpose of the plan is to complete a development and implementation strategy for a variety of recreational uses, as well as for the long-term protection of open space now and in the future. Working under the conditions of the Conservation Easement Agreement, the master plan will provide guidelines for the responsible management and use of the land. The plan will determine and balance appropriate uses of the property and provide for the protection and preservation of open space areas.
